

The Human Salmon Foundation's Izibi Initiative

“We believe in the ability of extreme poor urban communities to sustain themselves through the implementation of innovative waste management and recycling techniques.”

THSF aims to empower vulnerable communities to face the future with confidence by supporting sustainable health, education and community programs. One of our new strands of involvement is in the waste management and recycling industry. We see this unremitting social need felt globally, particularly in extreme poor urban communities. Herein lies a business opportunity for local entrepreneurs, where the pursuit of profit blends seamlessly with the pursuit of the common good.
